A. INTRODUCTION

A.1 Context

On 27th July 2003, the European Commission adopted the Action Plan for the promotion of language learning and linguistic diversity. The Action Plan makes concrete proposals for 45 actions to be undertaken from 2004 to 2006 in three broad areas:

- firstly, the key objective of extending the benefits of language learning to all citizens as a lifelong activity;
- secondly, the need to improve the quality of language teaching at all levels;
- thirdly, the need to build a European environment which is really favourable to languages.

It proposes a series of actions to be taken at European level in 2004 - 2006 with the aim of supporting actions taken by local, regional and national authorities. Taken together, actions proposed, and those taken by Member States, should secure a major step change in promoting language learning and linguistic diversity.

Directly in-keeping with this context, the Directorate General Education and Culture issued the call for proposals EAC/45/03 of 31st July 2003. The European Language Council from the Freie Universität Berlin was selected to co-ordinate the whole project called ENLU - European Network for the promotion of Language Learning Among All Undergraduates.

The key aim of the project is to set up a trans-European network of higher education institutions and other relevant bodies which share the conviction that multilingual competence is an essential aspect of a European graduate's employability, citizenship and personal development and which are determined to create conditions - policies, resources, strategic partnerships - designed to make the conviction reality.

A.2 Presentation of ENLU

To define what could be the terms of reference of the ENLU network, it has been decided to identify practices (both success but also failure stories which are quite as much formative) divided into four main thematics or task force groups:

- Task Force 1: Institution-Wide language policies
Survey of existing examples of good practice relating to languages-for-all policies, both extensively and by means of detailed case studies. Development of a reference framework outlining the criteria to be taken into account in setting up a languages-for-all policy, with indications of the decision making structures, pedagogical choices, and quality enhancement measures entailed by such a policy.
- Task Force 2: Percentage of Undergraduates learning languages and range of languages being learnt
The objective is to build up the full European picture of how many people are studying a language, including the range of levels, credits, reasons, qualifications and of course which languages are chosen and why.

- Task Force 3 : ODL and Distance Learning
Investigation into the current use of open and distance learning (ODL) and e-learning within such provision and the potential for extending provision via these delivery formats.
- Task Force 4: Medium of Instruction in Undergraduate Studies
The objective is to examine realities, trends and pre-requisite quality factors, in order to describe strategic steps necessary allowing "medium of instruction" to be an integrated feature of a language policy, be it centralized or institutional.

In parallel, the ENLU partnership and more precisely the Pôle Universitaire Européen de Lorraine has launched a marketing survey - the results of which are the subject of this report - to gain a comprehensive overview of the current situation regarding:

- the number of undergraduates learning languages
- the range of languages being learnt
- HEIs that have a "languages-for-all" policy
- existing organisational models and practices relevant to the generalisation of language learning among undergraduates, and therefore create a basis for reflection and action.

In addition to this, the partnership is to prepare some national monographies relying on the national Relay Points of the Coordinator - in other words national /regional contact points for ENLU who will be active throughout the life of the project and providing maximum geographical coverage.

Out of all the information gathered and the desk research evaluated, the ENLU partnership is to provide a consultation document and launch a European Web consultation, thus allowing the partnership to define the terms of reference of the ENLU network. A major European conference at the end of March 2006 is to be the perfect opportunity to present the achievements of the project and the official starting point of the network.

B. METHODOLOGY FOLLOWED

Here follows a description of the methodology used by the Pôle Universitaire Européen de Lorraine to carry out the marketing survey:

B.1 Context

Multilingual competence and language learning ability are now regarded as being essential aspects of European graduate's employability. As a result of the Bologna process, many European and national organisations and authorities agree on the fact that future European graduates must:

- Be able to communicate in at least two languages other than their mother tongue;
- Know how to learn new languages effectively;
- Have the confidence to learn a new language when the need or opportunity arises;
- Have first-hand experience in working and learning in and collaborating with other countries;
- Be familiar with other cultures and intercultural skills.

In other words, undergraduates must keep on learning languages in order to broaden their mobility and professional opportunities.

In parallel, the Lisbon strategy induces foreign languages as key basic skills required in the new coming knowledge-based economy society. Foreign languages represent opportunities in the current and general emphasis on lifelong learning, in the curriculum innovations on the way (modularisation, credits system), the importance given to skills and competence in the qualifications of graduates and the new learning environments now available.

Within such a context, the idea was thus to obtain reliable data on institutional language policies for undergraduate studies developed at European levels by HEIs and the percentage of undergraduates learning languages (+ range of these languages). Hence the need to design a targeted questionnaire to launch the ENLU marketing survey.

B.2 Design of the Questionnaire

To guarantee a high rate of answers, it has been decided 1) to design a questionnaire with only closed questions and boxes to be ticked. 2) To complete the questionnaire should not take more than ten minutes. See appendices for the whole questionnaire. Yet the key questions should be tackled. They have been divided into three main parts:

- ⇒ Background - language policy
- ⇒ Network
- ⇒ Additional questions

Background - Language Policy:

The aim of this part is double-sided. It is to get to know:

- First of all the university's point of view on language policy aimed at undergraduate students, how they consider it (very important - important - not very important - not relevant at all). Then to know if such a policy should be limited to given specific languages ("exclusive approach") or potentially open to all languages ("inclusive approach") - either the official languages of countries participating in the Socrates programme, regional languages in EU member states or even major non-Community languages.
- The practices and their context developed by the university in this field so far. The point here was to obtain an overview of the range of universities which have already implemented a language policy for undergraduate studies. Three elements are focused here: the operational duration of the policy, the potential external support while implementing such a policy, the degree of satisfaction regarding the results of the policy. If the university has not developed such a policy yet, the survey aims at identifying the motivations and the university's prospects in this field (potential need for external support then).

- In parallel, the first part of the questionnaire also aims at preparing the ground for the informative role which could be played by the ENLU network concerning the use of e-learning at undergraduate level and the approaches integrating content and language learning.

Network:

The second part of the questionnaire is more specifically dedicated to the services which could be offered by the ENLU network once set up and the corresponding interest of universities for them. The services comprise a large range of opportunities going from informative devices (via the network's website, newsletters or case studies and examples of good practices), to more targeted supporting tools (guidelines for the implementation of a language policy for undergraduates, seminars or workshops, distance support or even the launch of European projects for the promotion of language learning among undergraduates).

The conclusion of this part is the potential interest of the university to take part to such a network.

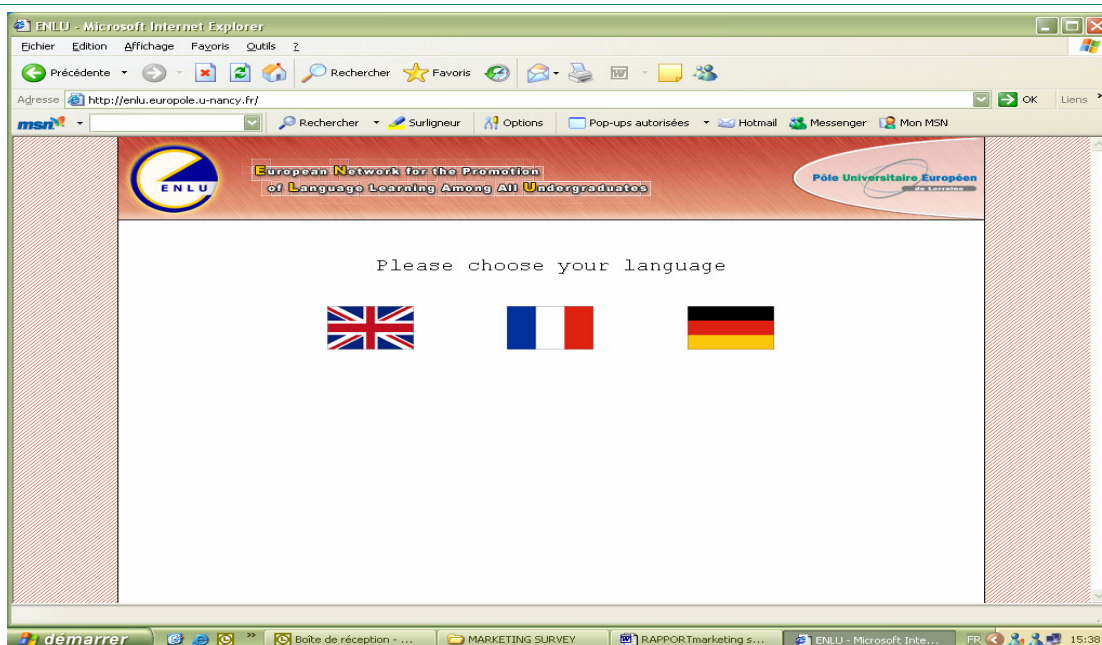

Additional Questions:

It seemed unavoidable to add two specific questions to obtain an overview of:

- the percentage of undergraduate students studying languages outside specific language-related programmes on the one hand;
- the range of these languages on the other hand. Besides, for each selected language, an order of priority was given by answering universities corresponding to the number of students enrolling for these language offerings.

To encourage a maximum number of answers, the questionnaire was then translated into English, French and German. A cover letter addressed to HEIs rectors, presidents and vice-chancellors was also written in the three languages: it introduced the rationale of the project and its main objectives and planned achievements, the context of the survey under consideration as well as the various ways to answer the questionnaire. It was signed by the coordinator of the project and printed on double headed paper (ELC + the Pôle).

A specific website was designed within the framework of the survey (<http://enlu.europole.unancy.fr/>) to host the three linguistic versions of the questionnaire and allow universities to answer the survey on-line. Should they prefer not to do so, universities were given the opportunity to download the questionnaire in Word format and send it back by e-mail or by fax.

B.3 Mailing to a Panel of HEIs

To make up a representative panel of higher education institutions, it seemed interesting to criss-cross data to identify European universities referenced for their EPS - European Policy Statement activities and universities known for their Integrated Language Course activities. The panel was completed with the references of universities transmitted via the Relay Points of the Co-ordinator. This represents a panel of about 450 universities. The panel is distributed as follows:

Country	Addressed HEIs
	Number	%
AT	12	2,6%
BE	17	3,7%
BG	12	2,6%
CH	3	0,7%

TOTAL	457	100,00%

The survey was launched on February 7th 2005 under the form a mass e-mailing to the whole panel using the cover letter and inviting the universities to complete the questionnaire on-line (or using the other opportunities).

Over a month and a half - duration of the survey - universities were given the opportunity to online their answers to the questionnaire. Two reminders were sent to ensure a rather representative rate of answers. The number of universities which answered the survey comes to 25% of the initial sample - 123 universities.

B.4 Writing of an Analytical Report

The last stage of the marketing survey is the analytical study of the 123 answers received under the form of:

- a statistical analysis of each question
- synthesis and preparation of the ground for the future actions of the ENLU network

C. STATISTICAL ANALYSIS OF THE ANSWERS

The overall analysis of the panel of universities which have answered the survey shows a rather over-representation of Belgian Higher Education Institutions (7 institutions answered the survey compared to the 17 in the initial sample) and French universities (18 answered the survey in comparison to the 38 in the initial sample) - in other words with a rate of answers close to 50%.

Under-representation - rate of answers under 20% - concerns Estonian universities (1 answering institution against 10 in the initial sample), Spanish universities (only 3 of them answered the survey while 19 were initially addressed) and British universities (only 8 of them answered the survey while 42 were initially addressed). Universities from Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Iceland, Malta and Slovenia (ranking from 0.2% to 2% in the initial sample) are not represented at all in the panel of universities which finally have answered the survey.

The other source countries show a balanced representativeness in comparison between the initial sample and the target panel.

It has nevertheless to be underlined that out of the 59 ENLU partners, only 17 of them answered this questionnaire.

Background – Language Policy

The starting point of the survey – quite reassuring actually – is that the large majority (70.7%) of the universities which have answered consider that it is very important to develop an institutional language policy aiming at promoting language learning among undergraduates.

What is then interesting is to pinpoint ENLU partners among these favourable answers. The following table shows a reassuring majority of them being aware of the high importance of developing such a policy.

Answers from ENLU partners

As to a presentation of the results broken down into countries, it is difficult to outline real characteristics with regards to the low numbers of answers for some of the countries. The figures for the whole set of questions are available in appendix E.10 and may cast a light on the operation of the future network to be developed. Yet it can be underlined that on this specific question, the Swedish universities which answered prove to be little convinced of the need to develop such a linguistic policy at undergraduate level.

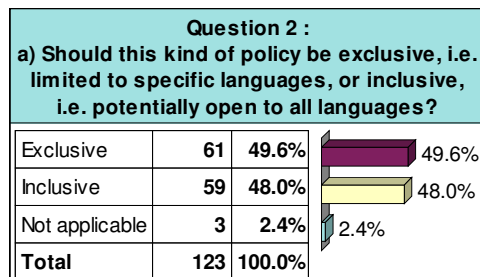

Answers from Swedish universities

One Estonian university is part of the panel of answering higher education institutions, but being the only one, its representativity may be questioned – even if they chose the “not very important” item.

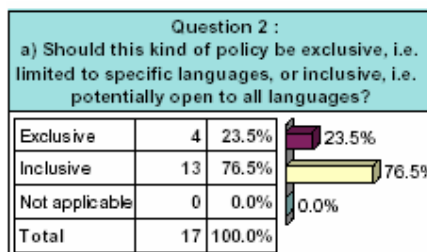

→ Priority Languages

The point is to determine whether this policy should be limited to some specific languages or potentially open to any language. The survey here focuses on an interestingly totally balanced point of view, for half universities (48%) are in favour of an inclusive approach and the other half (49.6%) would prefer an exclusive approach.

However, among ENLU partners, the results show a clear preference for the development of such a policy in favour of all languages.

b) If you ticked "exclusive", indicate which languages should be given priority?
Official languages of countries participating in the Socrates Programme

Answers from ENLU Partners

The ambivalence underlined by the survey is counterbalanced by the rather "classical" or "conventional" choice of languages which should be given priority to in the case of an exclusive policy: English, German, French, Spanish and Italian.

A closer look at figures broken down into countries (see appendix E.10) yet shows the following tendencies:

- The significant prominence to Russian corresponds to former historical links; on the one hand regarding Scandinavian countries (especially Finland) and on the other hand, PECO countries and the Baltic States.
- The other non-community languages (Chinese, Arabic and Japanese) were chosen by almost all the other countries in favour of an exclusive approach.

→ Language Policy Implementation

Once agreed that to develop a policy to promote language learning for undergraduates at institutional level is very important, the next step is to determine how many universities have already implemented such a policy. Closely connected with the first question, the study shows that two third of the universities (77) are not only aware of the importance of language skills development for undergraduates but have also put this theory into practice and developed a language policy. For most of them, the awareness and need to renovate and harmonize European higher education system - initiated by the Lisbon Convention (1997) - is truly accepted. More than 85% of them have indeed implemented a language policy aimed at undergraduates for more than three years.

Yet a closer look at the figures shows that only half of ENLU Partners - who answered the survey - have implemented a language policy for undergraduates up until now.

Answers from ENLU Partners

It has to be noticed that 64% of these universities designed such a policy without any external support or advice and yet the large majority claims to be satisfied with it (82.4%).

The 46 universities which still do not have implemented a language policy justify this situation with two elements. For a large majority of them (72.4%), the lack of human and financial resources is an essential factor to explain the late development of measures to promote language learning - knowing that most of the respondents are heads of language centres in the universities involved.

The other element specified by universities may seem more disturbing: 64.5% of them justify their lack of involvement in the field of language policy for undergraduates by the fact that they do not consider it as a priority. This may be qualified by the free answers which underline two tendencies. In many countries, English learning has long been considered as necessary but enough. The consciousness of the importance of other foreign languages than English has emerged only recently. On the other hand, following the Bologna Declaration, universities are re-thinking their overall functioning rules. Language skills development is only a part of it.

In the light of the future networking of universities, it seems necessary to have a closer look at figures to identify potential country-specific clusters. The two following tables show the detailed distribution of the universities which have not implemented a language policy yet:

Total distribution of universities which have answered the survey

Detailed distribution of universities which have not implemented language policy yet

Considering a rate of answers superior at least to 50%, the following tendencies can be outlined:

- A majority of Western European countries (AT 3/3; DE 5/9; FR 6/18; IE 2/4; LU 1/1; NL 3/5; PT 3/6; UK 5/9) are to be found in this situation, meaning that the ENLU network could be an added value for such countries where the importance of foreign languages must be underlined. The opposition with Eastern countries - which have just joined the European Union - is quite significant. In these countries indeed, the challenges of language learning promotion seem to be already a matter of national awareness.
- For the Scandinavian States, the sample of respondents outlines the specific case of Denmark (3/4) and Sweden (8/9) where the ENLU network could be a helpful tool to develop language policy at undergraduates' level.

Yet, an encouraging total of 80% of the very same universities claim to be willing to develop and implement a language policy for undergraduates in their institution and two third of them would then require external support and advice to be able to implement such a policy.

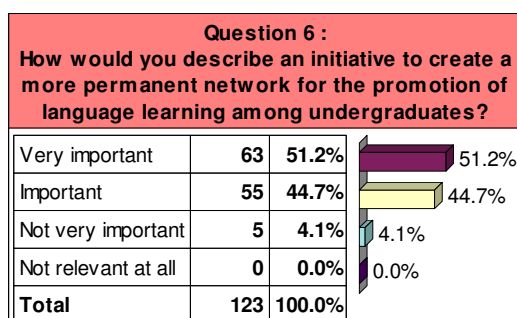

In terms of advice and support, both types of universities - with and without a language policy for undergraduate studies - are interested in informative tools about:

- The use of e-learning (94%) for language learning to facilitate independent learning and widening the range of language offers.
- The use of integrated content (92%), in other words to teach content courses through other languages.

▶ Network

In the prospect of the ENLU project, the survey underlines an undeniable interest of the panel of universities in favour of the creation of a permanent network for the promotion of language learning among undergraduates.

The survey shows a series of services and opportunities which the ENLU network could provide. From the interest shown by the universities which answered the survey, the following classification can be drawn:

- Universities would be most interested (66.2%) in being granted access to examples of good practice or case studies of HEIs which have implemented language policies for undergraduate studies - more or less successfully;
- The survey also underlines that most universities (57.5%) would like such a network to regularly launch calls for proposals to develop European projects, directly in-keeping with the promotion of language learning among undergraduates;
- The panel also shows a strong interest (56%) for some guidelines - sort of practical handbook - to help HEIs to develop and implement languages-for-all policies and practices;
- Then, universities (54%) would be strongly in favour a website providing general information in the field under consideration;
- A newsletter would be considered as a useful communication tool within such a network by half of the universities (50.5%) which have answered the survey;
- 48.5% of the panel would be in favour of the organisation of seminars and workshops aiming at providing training sessions either for the design of language policy or its implementation for undergraduate studies;
- Finally, almost 45% of the universities would be interested by a specific support - either distance or on the spot - provided by the ENLU network to help them implement such a policy in their institution.
- The answers given to "other services" item do not focus on additional services but rather specify the list mentioned above. Within the framework of the examples of good practice available via the ENLU network, universities would also like to be granted access to a database of practical course plans, with the dedicated number of hours and the training/teaching methods used. The second prominent suggestion given by universities is the possibility of the ENLU network - through its international dimension - to enhance language teachers mobility.

N.B the total number is superior to 100 because it was possible to tick several boxes.

As a logical conclusion from these answers and an encouraging statement regarding the future of the ENLU project, a very large majority of universities (92.7%) which have answered the survey would be very interested in being involved in such a network. Besides, most of them (80%) would willingly send one of their representatives to the final conference of the ENLU project which will be the actual launching or starting point of the network.

Additional Questions

The last two questions were designed to give an overview of the percentage and range of languages studied by undergraduates who are not specialised in language-related courses or take full-time language courses.

→ Languages studied by Students

It has to be noticed that two contradictory tendencies are at stake here. On both extremes, one third of the universities can be found. 28.5% of the panel claims that only less than 20% of their undergraduate students outside language studies attend optional language courses, while for 29.3% of the panel this figure shifts to 100% of their students. This could be counterbalanced by the answers given to question 3 - in other words the late growing awareness of the non-sufficiency of English in terms of employability and the need to totally re-think the operating rules of universities.

The survey also underlines that all the official languages of the countries participating in the Socrates programme or even the non-Community languages are offered to undergraduate students by the panel of universities which answered the survey. Yet, the interesting point is to note the number of students who take up these offerings. If we accept a simplified division into "high / average / low enrolment" the following distribution can be outlined:

As could be guessed, English is and remains by far the prominent language chosen by undergraduate students (92.5%). In terms of total number of answers, the next languages are: German, French, Spanish, Italian and Russian. It has to be noticed yet that for these languages, the enrolment rate is only considered as average:

- German : 48.5%
- French : 37.5%
- Spanish : 42.5%
- Italian : 50%
- Russian : 42%

Apart from these "traditional languages", and even if the number of undergraduate students attending the following language offerings is rather low, the survey also focuses a series of languages with a rather significant number of answers:

The relative prominence of these languages is particularly significant in correlation with the analysis or characterization of the panel of answers mentioned here above. It has indeed to be noticed that except for Swedish, neither of these language corresponds to an over-represented country in the final panel.

Yet once relating the percentage of students learning specific languages to specific countries, the study of the figures (see appendix E.10) outline the following remarks:

- ♦ In the very great majority of the answering universities - but one thing may explain the other - the percentages of students enrolled in language offerings reflect a large linguistic diversity.
- ♦ If English is the common denominator between all the answers, former historical links or current geographical and economic relationship assuredly explain the choice made by students in terms of foreign languages. In Portugal, students study Spanish and vice versa. In Belgium, students choose Dutch, French and German. In Germany, some students enrol for Turkish offerings. In the PECO countries and the Baltic States, in addition to the "traditionally learnt" languages - in other words, English, German, French and Spanish - students are keenly interested in learning Russian.
- ♦ In Western European countries, students seem to turn also to non-community languages, such as Arabic, Chinese and Japanese.
- ♦ In the Scandinavian States, the interaction between each one is obvious. For example, in addition to the learning of Finnish, Swedish students also choose to learn Danish and Icelandic.

D. CONCLUSION – RECOMMENDATIONS

- ⇒ It cannot be denied that three quarters of the questioned European universities did not answer the present survey. Such an attitude may have several motivations among which the need to implement institutional language policies is not considered as a priority for most of them. This implies that there is still work to do and that one of the first tasks of the future ENLU network will be to increase European universities' awareness that to acquire linguistic skills right from the beginning of higher studies has become a better guarantee for students' employability, mobility and personal development.
- ⇒ As the analysis of the respondents sample shows, and although the learning of English is the common denominator, in the universities which have implemented language policy, undergraduate students are provided with varied linguistic offerings and the range of languages chosen is extensive. This is definitely a path to be followed and enhanced.
- ⇒ For those which have not developed institutional language policy yet, the survey shows a lack of human and financial resources dedicated to the problematic of developing undergraduates' language skills - as underlined by the heads of language centres in the surveyed universities. To ensure European universities competitiveness via its students' employability, such a problematic should assuredly become a priority.
- ⇒ Hence the idea of creating a network of European universities whose added value - such as underlined by the survey - could be three-folded:
 - The ENLU network should be used as an informative tool, providing either general information on the field under consideration (newsletter) or examples of good practice and case studies;
 - The ENLU network should also play an incentive role by launching calls for proposals to develop European projects to promote language learning among undergraduates;
 - Finally, the ENLU network should be a formative tool. The training/support could be under the shape of seminars or workshops or even practical examples of course plans.

Dear Rector / President / Vice-Chancellor,

Your University is one of 400 higher education institutions from the 30 countries participating in the Socrates Programme that are being requested to participate in a panel survey regarding language learning among undergraduate students of all disciplines. The survey is part of a major EU project: ENLU – European Network for the Promotion of Language Learning Among All Undergraduates (12/2003-12/2005). The ENLU project is linked to the European Commission's Action Plan 2004-2006 "Promoting language learning and linguistic diversity". It is co-ordinated by the Conseil Européen pour les Langues / European Language Council (CEL/ELC) from the Freie Universität Berlin.

One of the principal aims of the project is to establish whether there is sufficient consensus among European universities on the conviction underlying the project, i.e. that multilingual competence is an essential aspect of a European graduate's employability, citizenship and personal development and that it would be useful to create a more permanent European structure designed to support universities in their endeavour to promote language learning among their undergraduates.

In line with this, the ENLU project will seek to

1. establish whether there is sufficient demand for the more permanent network devoted to promoting language learning among undergraduates, as envisaged by the ENLU partnership
2. find out what expectations higher education institutions might have in regard to the creation of a this kind of network;
3. obtain a clear idea of what specific services a network of this kind could and should provide to higher education institutions across Europe;
4. identify and disseminate examples of good practice;
5. get a better understanding of the specific needs and demands of universities in different parts of Europe;
6. establish whether a significantly large number of higher education institutions would be interested in joining the network envisaged

The ENLU project will have two major outcomes:

- a consultation document designed to serve as reference material for a Europe-wide consultation among higher education institutions and other stakeholders
- a major European conference to present the outcomes of the ENLU project and to take decisions on future action (Nancy, 18-19 November 2005)

The Europe-wide consultation will be conducted in May-June 2005. The outcomes of the consultation, together with the document underpinning it, are to provide reference points for the permanent structure envisaged, which has been provisionally named HELP – Higher Education Language Provision.

In order to have a firm basis for the preparation of the consultation document, we have decided to conduct a survey among a representative panel of higher education institutions, and it is in this context that I am writing to you today. We should be immensely grateful if you could complete the short questionnaire appended at your earliest convenience. The questionnaire has been designed in such a way that it should not take more than 10 minutes to complete it. We would like to encourage you to complete the questionnaire online <http://enlu.europole.u-nancy.fr/>. However, should you prefer not to do so, you can also send us the completed questionnaire by e-mail as a Word attachment or by fax. For further details, see the information provided in the introductory section of the questionnaire.

The electronic questionnaire will be available from 7 February – 7 March 2005. A first evaluation of the responses received and an initial interpretation of the results will be undertaken immediately after 7 March; as a member of the panel, you will be sent the draft report of the survey before the beginning of April.

The preparation and evaluation of this survey has been entrusted to the Pôle Universitaire Européen de Lorraine in Nancy, which is a partner of the ENLU project. If you have any questions regarding this survey, please do not hesitate to get in touch with members of the team in Nancy (Barbara Vassener - vassener@europole.u-nancy.fr; Tel + 33 (0) 3 83 17 67 88 - Fax +33 (0) 3 83 17 67 66).

Thank you for your co-operation.

Yours faithfully,

Monsieur Le Président, Vice-Président,

Votre université fait partie d'un échantillon de 400 établissements d'enseignement supérieur à travers 30 pays participant au programme Socrates, invités à participer à une enquête sur l'apprentissage des langues chez les étudiants de 1^{er} cycle universitaire – toutes disciplines confondues. Cette enquête est une partie constitutive d'un vaste projet européen: ENLU – European Network for the Promotion of Language Learning Among All Undergraduates / Réseau Européen pour la Promotion de l'Apprentissage des Langues en 1^{er} Cycle (12/2003-12/2005). Le projet ENLU projet est directement lié au Plan d'Action 2004-2006 de la Commission Européenne « Promouvoir l'apprentissage des langues et la diversité linguistique ». Il est coordonné par le Conseil Européen pour les Langues / European Language Council (CEL/ELC) de la Freie Universität Berlin.

Un des objectifs de ce projet est de déterminer s'il existe, au sein des universités européennes, un consensus suffisant autour de la conviction sous-jacente au projet, selon laquelle les compétences plurilingues d'un jeune diplômé sont un aspect essentiel de son employabilité, de sa citoyenneté et de son développement personnel, et qu'il serait utile de créer une structure européenne plus permanente visant à soutenir les universités dans leurs démarches de promotion de l'apprentissage des langues chez leurs étudiants de 1^{er} cycle. Dans cette optique, le projet ENLU va tenter

7. de déterminer s'il existe une demande importante pour un réseau permanent dédié à la promotion de l'apprentissage des langues chez les étudiants de 1er cycle universitaire, tel qu'il est envisagé par le partenariat ENLU ;
8. d'identifier les attentes des établissements d'enseignement supérieur face à la création d'un tel réseau;
9. d'obtenir une appréciation claire des services spécifiques qu'un tel réseau pourrait ou devrait apporter aux établissements d'enseignement supérieur à travers l'Europe;
10. d'identifier et de diffuser des exemples de bonnes pratiques;
11. d'acquérir une meilleure compréhension des besoins et des demandes spécifiques des universités des différentes régions d'Europe;
12. de déterminer si un nombre significatif d'établissements d'enseignement supérieur serait prêt à rejoindre le réseau en projet.

Le projet ENLU se traduira par deux grandes réalisations:

- un document de consultation conçu pour servir d'outil de référence pour une consultation à l'échelle européenne des établissements d'enseignement supérieur et autres parties prenantes.
- une vaste conférence européenne pour présenter les résultats du projet ENLU et acter des décisions sur une action future (Nancy, 18-19 Novembre 2005)

La consultation à l'échelle européenne sera menée en mai-juin 2005. Les résultats de cette consultation, ainsi que le rapport qui en résultera, serviront de cadre de référence à la structure permanente envisagée, provisoirement appelée HELP – Higher Education Language Provision / Offre linguistique de niveau universitaire.

Afin d'obtenir une base solide pour le document de consultation, nous avons décidé de lancer une enquête auprès d'un panel d'établissements d'enseignement supérieur et c'est précisément dans ce contexte que je m'adresse à vous aujourd'hui. Nous vous serions infiniment reconnaissant si vous acceptiez de compléter ce petit questionnaire dans les meilleurs délais. Ce questionnaire a été conçu de telle façon qu'il ne nécessitera pas plus de dix minutes pour être complété. Nous vous encourageons vivement à le remplir en ligne <http://enlu.europole.u-nancy.fr/>. Néanmoins, vous pouvez aussi nous le retourner rempli en fichier Word par e-mail ou par fax. Pour plus de détails, reportez-vous à la partie introductive du questionnaire.

Le questionnaire sera accessible du 7 Février au 7 Mars 2005. Une première évaluation des réponses reçues et une analyse initiale des résultats seront immédiatement menées après le 7 mars. En tant que membre du panel, vous recevrez un projet de rapport début avril.

La préparation et l'évaluation de cette enquête ont été confiées au Pôle Universitaire Européen de Lorraine à Nancy, qui est partenaire du projet ENLU. Si vous avez des questions concernant cette enquête, n'hésitez pas à contacter l'équipe à Nancy (Barbara Vassener - vassener@europole.u-nancy.fr; Tel + 33 (0) 3 83 17 67 88 - Fax +33 (0) 3 83 17 67 66).

Merci pour votre coopération.

Je vous prie d'agréer, Monsieur Le Président, Vice-Président, l'expression de mes salutations distinguées,

Wolfgang Mackiewicz

European
Language Council
Conseil Européen pour

Sehr geehrte Frau Rektorin, sehr geehrter Herr Rektor,
Sehr geehrte Frau Präsidentin, sehr geehrter Herr Präsident,

Ihre Universität gehört zu 400 ausgewählten Hochschulen in den 30 am Sokrates Projekt teilnehmenden Staaten, die wir bitten möchten, sich an einer Umfrage zum Fremdsprachenerwerb von Hörern aller Fächer, die sich im grundständigen Studium befinden, zu beteiligen. Die Umfrage erfolgt im Rahmen eines größeren EU-Projekts: ENLU – European Network for the Promotion of Language Learning Among all Undergraduates (12/2003 – 12/2005). Das ENLU-Projekt steht im Zusammenhang mit dem Aktionsplan zur "Förderung des Sprachenlernens und der Sprachenvielfalt" der Europäischen Kommission für die Jahre 2004-2006. Das Projekt wird vom Conseil Européen pour les Langues / European Language Council (CEL/ELC) in enger Zusammenarbeit mit der Freien Universität Berlin koordiniert.

Eines der Hauptziele des Projekts ist es festzustellen, ob eine hinreichende Zahl von Universitäten die dem Projekt zugrundeliegende Überzeugung teilt, dass mehrsprachige Kompetenz von entscheidender Bedeutung für die Beschäftigungsfähigkeit, Europabürgerschaft und persönliche Entwicklung europäischer Graduierten ist und dass die Errichtung eines auf Dauer angelegten Netzes zur Unterstützung der Hochschulen in ihrem Bemühen, den Spracherwerb im grundständigen Studium zu fördern, sinnvoll und nützlich wäre.

Das ENLU-Projekt verfolgt u.a. die Absicht,

1. zu bestimmen, in welchem Maße eine Nachfrage nach einem auf Dauer angelegten Netz zur Förderung des Fremdsprachenerwerbs besteht,
2. die Erwartungen von Hochschulen an ein solches Netz zu sondieren,
3. die spezifischen Dienstleistungen, die ein solches Netzwerk den Hochschulen bereitstellen sollte, zu definieren,

4. Beispiele guter Praxis zu sammeln und zu verbreiten,
5. ein genaues Verständnis der spezifischen Bedürfnisse von Universitäten in den verschiedenen Teilen Europas zu erlangen, festzustellen, ob eine hinreichende Anzahl von Hochschulen daran interessiert ist, in einem auf Dauer angelegten Netz zur Förderung des Fremdsprachenerwerbs mitzuarbeiten.

Das ENLU-Projekt wird seine Vorstellungen und Ergebnisse in zweierlei Form der Öffentlichkeit vorlegen:

- durch ein Konsultationspapier, das als Basis für eine europaweite Konsultation von Hochschulen und anderen Stakeholdern dienen wird.
- durch eine große europäische Konferenz (Nancy, 18.-19. November 2005), in der die Ergebnisse des ENLU-Projekts vorgestellt und Entscheidungen über weitere Maßnahmen getroffen werden.

Die europaweite Konsultation wird im Zeitraum von Mai bis Juni 2005 durchgeführt werden. Die Ergebnisse der Konsultation sowie das ihr zugrundeliegende Papier sollen die Referenzpunkte für die Errichtung eines auf Dauer angelegten Netzes festlegen, für das der Arbeitstitel HELP – Higher Education Language Provision gewählt worden ist.

Um eine Basis für die Erarbeitung des Konsultationspapiers zu gewinnen, haben wir beschlossen, eine Umfrage unter einer repräsentativen Auswahl von Hochschulen durchzuführen. Das ist der Anlass dieses Briefes. Wir wären Ihnen sehr dankbar, wenn Sie bereit wären, den diesem Brief beigefügten, kurzen Fragebogen auszufüllen. Der Fragebogen wurde so konzipiert, dass sein Ausfüllen nicht mehr als zehn Minuten in Anspruch nimmt.

Es würde uns die Auswertung erleichtern, wenn Sie den Fragebogen online ausfüllen könnten <http://enlu.europole.u-nancy.fr/>. Sollten Sie von dieser Möglichkeit nicht Gebrauch machen wollen, möchten wir Sie bitten, den ausgefüllten Fragebogen, sobald als möglich, per Email als Word-Datei oder per Fax an uns zurückzusenden. Im einleitenden Text des Fragebogens finden Sie weitere Informationen.

Der elektronische Fragebogen steht Ihnen von 7. Februar bis 7. März 2005 online zur Verfügung stehen. Eine erste Auswertung der eingegangenen Antworten wird unmittelbar nach dem 7. März stattfinden. Als eine der Institutionen, die für diese Umfrage ausgewählt wurden, werden Sie den ersten Entwurf des Umfrageberichts anfangs April erhalten.

Mit der Vorbereitung, Durchführung und der Auswertung dieser Umfrage ist das Pole Universitaire Européen de Lorraine de Nancy, ein Partner des ENLU Projekts, betraut worden. Sollten Sie Fragen bezüglich dieser Umfrage haben, wenden Sie sich bitte an die Mitglieder des Teams in Nancy (Kontakt: Barbara Vassener – vassener@europole.u-nancy.fr; Tel.: +33-383-176788; Fax: +33-383-176766).

Wir bedanken uns herzlich für Ihre Mitarbeit,

Mit freundlichen Grüßen,

Wolfgang Mackiewicz
ENLU-Projektleiter

European
Language Council
Conseil Européen pour
les Langues

This questionnaire is addressed to the heads and deputy heads of a representative sample of universities and other institutions of higher education across Europe. The purpose of the questionnaire is to obtain, at a European level, information relevant to the overarching aim of promoting language learning among Europe's undergraduate students. More specifically, the questionnaire is to allow us to assess to what extent and in what ways a more permanent European network would constitute an added value in regard to the design and implementation of languages-for-all-undergraduates policies and practices.

Please fill in the questionnaire online <http://enlu.europole.u-nancy.fr/>
Alternatively, it can be downloaded and returned by e-mail as a Word attachment (vassener@europole.u-nancy.fr), by fax (+33 (0) 3 83 17 67 66) or by post (Pôle Universitaire Européen de Lorraine – to the attention of Barbara VASSENER – 34, cours Léopold / F - 54052 Nancy Cedex).

The questionnaire consists of ten (sets of) questions only, and a maximum of ten minutes is required for completing it.

We should be grateful if the questionnaire could be returned before 7th March 2005.
