List of actors to the codebook for Discursive Actor Attribution Analysis

2014 – 2015, Version 11.0

The Greeks, the Germans, & the Crisis

Preface: Using This Actor List

This actor list presents all individual codes for all actors. Specific actors not included in this list are coded according to the specificity available in the code list and additionally their name is entered in the string variable¹ NAME variable (i.e. ORGNAME, ASNAME, AA-NAME) with the full name. These can be recoded later.

This list does not include all possible combinations of codes. Many functions are only captured for Greek and German actors. IN principle, however, all functions and geographical specifications can be generated in analogy to the existing ones. Use the German actors as the standard structure to generate “absent” actors.

In the following, we first explain the logic of the construction of codes. In the second large section, starting page 12, you find the actual actor codes.

For past or future actors, refer to the AATIME variable in the codebook!

1. General Explanations and Structure of Codes

Logic of Actor Codes

- Differentiation of the actors according to their geographical origin: National (Germany, Greece, other EU-member states, other non-EU-States), Transnational (EU-European, international / global)
- Differentiation of the actors according to the nature of the societal (sub-) system: Media, politics, economy, science, civil society
- Differentiation of the actors according to their function within the respective societal system

Digits:

- Digit 1: geographical origin
- Digit 2: geographical origin
- Digit 3: nature of societal (sub-) system
- Digit 4: function
- Digit 5: function
- Digit 6: function

Coding Rules

The rules for coding actors are laid out in the codebook for Discursive Actor Attribution Analysis, section 6.2.

² Code only clandestine/anonymous if actors intentionally conceal their identity. If the identity of an actor is simply unknown use the respective “not specified” codes.

³ See codebook: The sub-system XX7XXX (actors ‘society’) in the actor list is NOT a “back-up” sub-system for all those vague actors which do not fit into other systems. It is mainly designed to code affected collectivities in the reason chain. In exceptional cases, the entries in this subsystem can be coded as sender or addressee. In these cases, try to stick to the entries in the actor list as close as possible.

⁴ See Germany and Greece for further subdivisions. Apply to other nationalities accordingly.

XX716X Generations

Social Phenomena as actors - divided by functional subsystems

XX91XX Social phenomena of the economy as social actors / Social phenomena as actors of the economy

XX92XX Social phenomena of society and the state as actors

XX99XX Other social phenomena as actors

2. Coding principles for EU actors

Hybrid actors on European level:

Actors of intergovernmental bodies such as the European Council of the Council of Ministers

Principally, actors of the European Council of the Councils of Ministers are coded according to their national functions (e.g. the German and Greek chancellor/prime minister and the national ministers). Exceptions apply to the European leadership positions: The president of the European Council, the High Representative of the Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy, the president of the Euro-group and the European Presidency are coded as European representatives, and not according to their nationality.

Actors of supra-national bodies such as the European Commission and the European Parliament:

Actors of the European Commission, the European Parliament, the European Central Bank, etc. are always coded on European level. Still, according to the research framework the coder has to distinguish between German and Greek actors (and actors of other nationality) within EU level codes (see the actual codes for the EU level). European leadership positions such as the president of the European Commission, the President of the European Parliament, and the President of the European Central Bank are coded as such; the actors' nationality has not to be coded as it can be added automatically later to these individual actors.

3. Practical issues concerning the data-mask-coding

When coding economic actors (so far mainly coded according to different branches) that are not individual persons, the coder has to add the specific name of the organization / institution in the String variable NAME (i.e. ORGNAME, ASNAME, or AANAME). This allows to eventually add a further coding category later on in the case of frequent occurrence.

The same always applies for the coding of other actors (of the political system, the economy...). Here too, the coder must write down the name of the mentioned person, organization or institution in the String variable NAME (i.e. ORGNAME, ASNAME, or AANAME).

4. Coding past actors

When coding past actors as addressee, use the AATIME variable as specified in the code-book. In these cases, it is crucial to specify the past actor in the AANAME String variable.

Remark Parties: National Party codes are structured according to affiliation to European Parliament Groups. The First two digits indicate the geographical location. The next two indicate the functional specification, in this case political party =28. The fifth digit indicates the corresponding European Parliament Group, which implies the political orientation, and the sixth digit indicates the actual party. For parties which are not represented in the EP and not affiliated to an EP group, individual digits are assigned case-by-case. This implies that the codes in these cases do not allow inferences about the political orientation (e.g. German Party AFD is coded: 112893). For party youth organizations we assign the code XX28X7-9, e.g. 112817=Junge Union (German Young Conservatives, CDU), whereas the mother party CDU is coded 112811). This does not apply for Parties are not present in the EP and not affiliated to an EP group!

For an overview of parties other than Greek, German or European Parties, see Party Table on pages 52 ff. Party leaders are coded as individual actors XX2901 + party affiliation in the respective variables. The same applies for party spokespersons (XX2902).

Social Phenomena as Actors

In reporting and public debates sometimes phenomena are treated as if they were independently acting. We find sentences like “The market punishes the government for excessive debts” or abstract references such as “globalization forces governments to decrease payroll taxes”. If phenomena such as “the market” or “globalization” or “nature” are presented as actors, we follow these discursive constructions that we find in the press: Phenomena are coded as actors if they are treated as such in the reporting and if they refer to phenomena which are perceived as beyond the control of individual or collective actors. That means, a phenomenon is treated and coded as an actor if all the following conditions are given:

- actorhood is assigned to phenomena according to the text
I.e. the phenomenon is the subject of the sentence and is combined with a verb that represents an activity
- the constructed actor is not a figurative description of actors
(see section 6.4 “collective actors”, “vague actors”, “diffuse actors”). E.g. the sentence, “Germany opposes Eurobonds...” is assigning the country “Germany” the status of an actor, but the context (in and beyond the article) clearly indicates that the journalist refers to the political subsystem which can be coded as such. Another example is: “German banks urge Merkel to save the Euro” which again clearly refers to actors in the classical sense, i.e. banks as part of the societal subsystem Economy. The same applies to vague actors such as the “majority of Germans” or “the people” (see the section “Society” XX7XXX in the actor list).

- the phenomenon is not a normative or moral principle
E.g. “Democracy tells us not to ignore...”: democracy might look like a potential actor but it is not because it is a normative principle which is spelled out. The sentence could be rephrased in the way: “Because we want to follow democratic principles we cannot ignore...”. Accordingly, this information is relevant for the coding of impact but not of actors.

Use the interpretation of a phenomenon as an actor only if these three criteria can be substantiated from the text and context.

In the coder list, social phenomena as actors can be found under the codes XX9XXX. Use these codes only if the codes of all other subgroups (codes XX1XXX to XX8XXX) do not apply.
