Ogre-faced Spiders:

Nocturnal Senses and Hunting Behavior

Jay Stafstrom, Cornell University
Ithaca, New York, USA

Ogre-faced spiders are nocturnal predators that ensnare insect prey using a net held between their front legs. These spiders possess highly specialized sensory systems allowing for active capture of fast-moving prey in near-total darkness. In this talk, I will discuss (and show!) the behavioral and sensory abilities of these remarkable, though often overlooked, nocturnal critters.
